

The Jack Kent Cooke Foundation Young Scholars Program

The application receipt deadline is Monday, April 26, 2010.

The Jack Kent Cooke Foundation Young Scholars Program supports hundreds of high-achieving students with financial need across the United States. Young Scholars receive a unique combination of services, which may include:

- Guidance in selecting a high school and, if necessary, support in applying to a private or magnet high school.
- Summer academic or enrichment programs.
- Computers, software, or other learning technology.
- Specialized support in music, art, science, math, or other subjects.
- College advising and counseling.

To answer any other questions we have created a frequently asked questions section of our website that can be accessed at, <http://www.jkcf.org/scholarships/young-scholars-program/faqs/>, and provides many answers to the most important questions to our parents and scholars.

Here is what our Scholars are saying about the Young Scholars Program:

The Young Scholars Program gives me opportunities to explore a larger scale of possibilities.

I have been given access to the Internet and can now print my papers from home. Most importantly, I have obtained better insight on life after being given the opportunity to travel.

Please encourage eligible seventh-grade students to visit our web site, www.jkcf.org, to learn more about the Young Scholars Program and to download an application. We are available to answer questions at 410-735-6270 or jkcinfo@jhu.edu.
